ABSTRACT

The word frequency lists presented in this publication were compiled to create a database for further research into vocabulary use, especially the variation in vocabulary due to differences in situation and social group membership. Taken from the natural conversations of 40 target children (four and a half to five years old) with their families, friends, teachers, and preschool classmates, the word lists are offered according to socioeconomic status and race: white middle class, black middle class, white working class, and black working class. The frequency information for each word is broken down according to the category of the speaker (target child, other children, adults, and experimenter) and situation (home, school, and transition). An explanation of the project, its design, and the procedures used to compile the word lists are offered in an introduction. (RL)

Spoken Words

Spoken Words is a frequency count and partial concordance for a corpus of natural conversations of 4½-5 year-olds with their families, friends, teachers, and preschool classmates. Families taking part in the study came from different socio-economic and racial groups; therefore, inferences about socio-economic and ethnic variation in language use can be made. For each word used, frequencies are given for every occurring combination of speakers (Target Child, Other Children, Adults, and Experimenter) and situations (School, Home, and Transition).

Why Investigate Word Use?

Accurate knowledge of what words children are exposed to in the home and at school, and what words they actually use, is important because of the role of vocabulary knowledge in significant areas such as intelligence testing and reading comprehension. A child's score on the vocabulary section of an intelligence test is highly indicative of his/her score on the test as a whole. Anderson and Freebody (1979), reviewing the relationship between scores on various intelligence tests and their respective vocabulary subtests, found the correlations to range between .71 and .98. They note that vocabulary knowledge seems to be the largest single factor influencing reading comprehension (Botzum, 1951; Clark, 1972; Fruchter, 1948; Wrigley, Saunders, & Newhaus, 1958). Vocabulary, that is, word difficulty, is also the major factor in formulas for readability (Klare, 1974-75).

Accurate information about socioeconomic variation in vocabulary is necessary to detect and correct for any vocabulary-based biases in testing. Children from lower socioeconomic levels are often found to perform more poorly than middle-class children on vocabulary tests (cf. Cazden, 1970; Lesser, Fifer, & Clark, 1965). There are a variety of factors, however, that might produce this effect. It is possible that children from lower socioeconomic levels simply know fewer words. Another possibility is that they may have equally large vocabularies, which, however, are substantially different from the set of words commonly used in school and on tests; that is, the vocabulary of some tests may be culturally biased in favor of white middle-class children. It is also quite possible that children from lower socioeconomic levels are not as successful as middle-class children in translating their real vocabulary knowledge into test scores, because of social-class-based differences in the way the children respond to the testing situation (cf. Bennett & Woll, 1980; Labov, 1972; Reich & Reich, 1977; Williams & Rivers, 1972).

A major theoretical and practical problem in education and psychological research comparing the verbal performance of people from different cultures or subcultures has been the inability to control for differential effects of the experimental situation on different groups. For almost any test, experimental task, or interview situation, the objection can be raised--often with good empirical support--that the situation in which the data are collected has a different effect on one group than on the other, thus potentially biasing the results (Wolfram, 1976).

Cole, Dore, Hall, and Dowley (1978), for example, compared the speech of young children on a trip to the supermarket with their speech describing this trip in a preschool classroom; there were measurable differences between the language patterns in the two situations in terms of speech-act composition and grammatical complexity. Bennett and Woll (1980) found that the dialect used in the instructions for a given task (Standard English vs. Vernacular Black English) had a number of significant effects on the verbal responses to the instructions. Numerous other studies show various, sometimes subtle, effects that different aspects of the situation can have on verbal performance. (See Cazden, 1970, for a review of some earlier research.) Such studies make it clear that an important, but difficult, part of any cross-cultural research (and this includes research involving different socioeconomic or ethnic groups within one society) is to find a methodology that controls for or takes into account such situational factors (cf. Cole & Scribner, 1974).

Our data base avoids a number of these problems. Most importantly, the situations in which the data were collected were both natural and varied. Conversations involving the target children were taped in a variety of situations at home and at school, and also en route between the two. The children and their families were, of course, aware that they were being taped, but this seemed to cause little if any disruption of normal activities. The wireless microphones were sewn into colorful vests which the target children wore without protest; their movements were not restricted, and they seemed to quickly forget about having them on. As for the rest of the family, there are occasional references (although relatively few) to the fact that the tape recorder is on, but the conversations are natural. Reading the transcripts, one can sense that the families are not "putting on an act" for the tape recorder and tend to ignore it almost completely. Even if the presence of the tape recorder does exert some effect, the fact remains that there is no other method, apart from deception, that would be less obtrusive for obtaining natural data of this kind.

The effects of the experimenter's race were minimized by using a black field worker with black families and a white field worker with white families.

The frequency lists given below present data on the linguistic performance of different social groups that is representative of their "real" patterns of usage in a way that manipulative procedures cannot be. The data indicate both the words that the children themselves use and the words that they are exposed to at home and at school; they provide a basis for answering questions such as the following:

1. How do the home environments of children of different ethnic and social-class backgrounds differ in the vocabulary that parents typically use?

2. How do the school environments of children of these different groups differ in the vocabulary that teachers typically use?

3. How does the vocabulary used by children differ across situation (home vs. school) for different ethnic and social-class groups?

Our data consist of tapes of natural conversations of 40 families, divided into four equal groups by race (black/white) and socioeconomic status (middle/working class). Social class was determined by the use of a scale developed for this purpose by Warner, Meeker, and Ellis (1949). The focus of the study was the 4½-5 year-old child in each family. This child and the field worker both wore wireless microphones. The audio tape equipment was manageable enough to permit data collection in a number of different settings, for example, in homes, shops, moving cars, and on sidewalks. Although parents, nontarget children, and others did not wear microphones, the two mikes used were, in general, sensitive enough to pick up all significant verbal interaction with the target children.

Language samples were collected over two consecutive days. Taping was done in ten different situations, which can be grouped into three categories:

Home:	Before school Arriving home from school Before dinner Dinner Before bed
Transition:	On the way to school
School:	Arriving at school Snack time Free play Teacher-directed activity

The tape for each individual situation runs from 15 to 60 minutes. This adds up to about seven hours for each family over the two-day period, and a total corpus of around 280 hours of conversation.

Handwritten transcripts of the recordings were made, and coded onto computer punch cards and then computer tape. Each turn of talk was transcribed onto a separate punch card (or several cards, if necessary). On each punch card, in addition to the transcription of the turn, the following information was coded: subject (family) number, socioeconomic status and race, speaker, situation, and a card number identifying its place in the sequence of cards.

Preparations of the List

A frequency list was originally compiled for our corpus with an entry for every "word," where "word" was defined operationally, as in Carroll, Davies, and Richman (1971), as a "string of characters bounded right and left by a space." To make this list more easily interpretable, and comparable with other word frequency lists, it has been subjected to some editing. Editing was necessary in dealing with the following problems:

The first type of problem involves distinguishing words from nonwords. Natural conversations, in addition to including incomplete and ill-formed sentences, also includes incomplete and ill-formed words, as well as sounds that are not words at all. When the corpus was originally transcribed, an effort was made to include everything uttered by any speaker audible on the tape. However, not all oral sounds are linguistic. People, and especially children, produce a variety of shrieks, squeals, groans, sighs, onomatopoeic sounds, and words of varying degrees of comprehensibility and novelty. In real life, the line between linguistic and nonlinguistic sounds does not appear to be a discrete one.

A basic criterion for deciding whether something counted as a word was to see whether it was listed in Webster's Third New International Dictionary, unabridged. Words not listed in Webster's Third were still counted as words if they could be identified as proper names (for example, the name of a subway line, IND, or a local radio station, WOR) or slang. Recognizable words in other languages familiar to the families (French, German, Italian, Spanish, Yiddish) were also included as words.

A second problem involves variations in pronunciation. Although the transcripts do not attempt to capture full phonetic detail, an attempt was made to capture significant differences of pronunciation. For example, the corpus contains not only sister, but also sistuh and sista.

Third, because of the sheer volume of material, there were also typographical errors and spelling errors in the transcripts.

The bulk of the editing work was done from an alphabetized list of character strings assembled from the corpus by computer. This list did not give the immediate context of these strings, so for the majority of hard-to-interpret strings, it was necessary to make the best interpretation possible without a context.

Familiarity with the corpus did make it possible to interpret some cases more accurately, e.g., to recognize that selofint was a word coined by a child to rhyme with elephant, or that contastify was in fact a deliberate coinage by one child.

Our editing procedures had the following goals:

1. To remove all spelling errors and inconsistencies.

2. To list every item under its standard spelling, so as to facilitate comparison with other lists, and to make it easy to locate items.

3. To preserve information about the original form of an item in the transcript whenever this information might be of potential value (e.g., in the case of variant pronunciations, but not in the case of spelling errors).

4. To flag nonstandard strings, e.g., sounds and made-up words.

5. To remove from the list all "garbage," i.e., stray characters and strings that could not be interpreted, so as to avoid inflating the size of any person's or group's vocabulary.

The actual editing process went as follows: An alphabetized frequency list of all character strings occurring in the corpus was searched by hand to identify all strings that might require adjustment according to the principals discussed above. The proposed changes were compiled into a computerized "revisions list," which included four types of rules to be applied to the original alphabetical list:

1. Rules which revise the form of an item.
2. Rules which list an item under its standard spelling, but preserve the original form occurring in the corpus.
3. Rules which flag an item as belonging to a special category.
4. Rules which delete items from the list.

We will explain and exemplify each of these types of rule below.

The first revisions list was applied to the original alphabetical list of character strings from the corpus, and the results were checked for any necessary changes. These changes were incorporated into the revisions list, which was then reviewed and revised several times to achieve as much completeness and consistency as possible. The final version of the revisions list was applied again to the original alphabetical frequency list to produce the edited lists presented here.

The first type of rule is that which simply changes the form of an item without preserving any information about the original form of that item in the corpus. This type of revision was used in the following cases:

1. Spelling errors, such as beleive for believe.
2. Removing stray nonalphabetic characters, and instances of the string (x), which was used to transcribe noises and uninterpretable sounds. This string was often accidentally typed adjacent to a word, producing strings like because(x) which had to be corrected.
3. Run-together words, in those cases where the juxtaposition of the words did not influence the pronunciation of either one, as in Johnsaid.
4. Segments or words in those cases where the incompleteness of the word seemed to be due to typographical error rather than to some variation in pronunciation. For example, ldren's was corrected to children's, matthe to matthew, and ngry to angry.

A second class of rules has the function of listing an item under its standard spelling while preserving the original form of the item as it occurs in the corpus. In general, this will include any case where the nonstandard spelling occurring in the corpus reflects some variation in the pronunciation of the word.

In the revised frequency list, there will be a frequency given for the number of occurrences of the standard spelling, and then an entry giving the frequency of each nonstandard version, with the original or nonstandard version of each item given after the standard spelling. Thus the list will have entries such as the following:

sister     sistuh

Word segments are also usually treated in this category. For example, corder is listed as recorder     corder. Irregular uses of inflectional endings are treated in parallel fashion, being listed under the nearest standard equivalent. For example, sended will appear in the list as sent     sended.

Run-together words also belong to this category, if the juxtaposition of the words effects the pronunciation of either one. ( For example, lemme will be found in the list both under let lemme and mə lemme.

A third category of rules includes those which flag an item as belonging to some special category. The two categories we have used in our list are "sounds" and "made-up words." Both of these belong to the category of nonwords, that is, character strings which are neither found in Webster's Third New International Dictionary, unabridged, nor are recognizable as proper names or words in familiar foreign languages.

Sounds are those nonwords which are onomatopoeic in form and which are nonlexical, that is, do not seem to function as lexical items with definable syntactic roles. These items are included in the main body of the list, but flagged as sounds.

Made-up words, on the other hand, are nonwords in the sense given above, but do appear to be used as lexical items with specific syntactic functions. For some such items we were able to verify their lexical function by finding their context in the corpus. In most cases, however, the judgment whether or not to include a character string in this category had to be made on the basis of its form alone, out of context. The following criteria were used to help determine whether some nonconventional string was intended as a word by the speaker:

First, if an item conformed to English spelling or phonotactic constraints, it might be a made-up word. Strings of all vowels, on the other hand, would automatically be classed as sounds. Certain rules of English word-formation also help to identify made-up words. For example, the suffix -y is often used to coin new adjectives, as in doopey. Other recognizable endings (-ish, -ify, -ing) also identify made-up words. If both a singular and plural for a form appear in the corpus (e.g., toxie and toxies), it can be assumed that the speaker intended the form as a lexical item.

(Please note that words with irregularities in their inflectional morphology were listed under the nearest equivalent standard form. For example, sended is listed under sent, goed under went, and goodest under best. On the other hand, words produced by nonstandard or novel application of the rules of derivational morphology were listed as "made-up words," for example, creamish, orangey, porkchoppies.)

If a string of characters was not found in Webster's Third or recognizable as a proper name or word in a foreign language, and could not be considered a "sound" or "made-up word," it was classed as "uninterpretable" and deleted from the list.

There are about 2,000 such items. This may seem like a large number, but on the other hand, given a corpus of around a million words of talk, and the fact that the frequency of a string classed as uninterpretable will almost always be one, this amounts to only 0.2% of the corpus, or two words out of a thousand. It is also clear from an inspection of the list of items marked uninterpretable that these are not low-frequency, rare lexical items whose exclusion might cause a serious underestimation of the vocabulary variety of some speakers or group. Rather, they are more likely to constitute garbled versions of more common words, sounds, or made-up words too incomprehensible to recognize as such.

Also deleted from the list were all items that clearly represented descriptions of context that sometimes occurred in the transcriptions, e.g., (noises), (laughs), and (undercurrent).

The Format of the Lists

A separate vocabulary list is given for each child, that is, for all speakers and situations associated with a given target child. The lists are further grouped according to the socioeconomic status and race of the target child's family, as follows:

- Group 1: White Middle Class,
- Group 2: Black Middle Class,
- Group 3: White Working Class,
- Group 4: Black Working Class.

In each list, the words are arranged alphabetically. For each word, there is a separate entry for each combination of situation and speaker categories for which that word occurs; no subtotals across speakers or situations are given in these lists.

In the leftmost column is the standard spelling of the item, if a standard spelling exists. Items classed as sounds or made-up words are given as they were spelled in the original transcription. In this example, backbiggle is a made-up word, and bahoo is a sound.

For those items which occurred with a nonstandard "phonetic" spelling in the original transcription, the standard spelling is followed by the original transcription, as with because 'cause in the example given. Because of space limitations, only the first seven characters of the original spelling can be printed to the right of the standard spelling; this must be kept in mind in the case of longer words.

The three columns on the right of each entry give the situation code, the speaker code, and the frequency with which that word occurs for that speaker or speakers in that situation.

The situation codes are as follows:

H = Home; this includes:	Before school Arriving home from school Before dinner Dinner Before Bed
T = Transition; this includes:	On the way to school
S = School; this includes:	Arriving at school Snack time Free play Teacher-directed activity

The speaker codes are as follows:

T = Target child

Spoken Words

xviii

A = Adults, including parents, teacher's aides, and others

C = Other children, those at school, and brothers and sisters at home

E = Experimenter (field worker)

O = Others, includes unidentified speakers, groups of persons speaking together, and the TV or radio.

Thus, in the example given, the word bad was used six times by the target child at home, and once by the target child at school; bad was also used once by other children at school, twice by adults at home, and twice by the experimenter at home.

The information contained in these lists is also available on computer tape, to facilitate statistical analysis. It is hoped that the data presented here will prove useful for further research on vocabulary in spoken language, and especially for research on variation in vocabulary use relating to differences in situation and social group.
